FIG. 7

Past Message Priority

When people send you a message through JumpKnowledge, they usually have to specify how relevant and time critical the message is for you. Because there is no exact answer for that, the person chooses one of the choices in the "How sure?" column. The "Not chosen" points are assigned to messages that people did not specify relevant and time critical.

Below are the point values that are associated to each "How sure?" value. You can change the point values as long as you keep it logical. For example, Probably yes should always have more points than Maybe. The points below reflect that for most people a past messages (that is relevant) is usually more important than a published message. Late points are added each additional day that you don't read time-critical messages that you received. More information and examples...

How sure?	Relevant	Time Critical
	Points	Points	Late points
Definitely yes	65	35	10
Probably yes	45	25	10
Maybe	25	15	5
Probably not	0	0	0
Not chosen	20		0

Sender Priority

You can change the Category and Points for each person. When you are finished making changes, click "Save changes". If you don't want to save the changes you made, click "Cancel change" instead.

You should assign more points to people that pass you consistently important messages and you should assign negative points to people that pass you consistently irrelevant or unimportant messages.

Use categories to help you organize your address book so you can easily select the right people to pass messages to. Choose "<New>" to add a new category.

People in your address book that are no longer notified through the email address you entered for them have "alternate" listed next to the email address. What is this?
